devastating political document which reinforces chronic western economic complaints. Retired Supreme Court Justice Emmett Hall implies the West has been a victim of an historic mercantilism emanating from Ottawa. aided and abetted by two railways and a compliant Canadian Transport Commission. The report's implications are as searing and far reaching as the Berger report, and may eventually eclipse the Mackenzie controversy in terms of changing Canada's economic fabric.

Two key recommendations would see almost 2,200 miles of track abandoned in Western Canada, while another 2,300 miles of track would be administrated by a Prairie Rail Authority. Both suggestions should take place without reference to the CTC, according to the report. For the first time since the CPR was built. this' would mean a western authority would manage grain transportation. The commission notes the proposed authority should be "a body dedicated exclusively to the public service and relieved of the commercial standards of the corporations it will supersede. Crows Nest freight rates, in effect since 1922, should be maintained and expanded to embrace all agricultural products: that is processed and manufactured items should reap the Still, the report estimates an initial

The Hall Commission on Grain benefits of the old accord too. The dif-saving of $254 million in capital re-Handling and Transportation is a ference between current freight rates and transportation costs should be paid directly to the railways, the report maintains. National interest and the importance of the western grain industry to Canada's balance of payments demands that substantial portions of any rate increase should be borne by the federal government.

> a rationalization of the policies governing 18,736 miles of track in western Canada. When the layman reads that west coast elevators operate only five days a week compared to the railway's seven days, or that grain traffic between the two rail lines is not interchangeable to utilize shortest routes, it becomes obvious thast the greatest rail system in the world is derelict. The dichotomies illustrated in this report are a harsh judgment against government. railways and the CTC. If Hall is on the side of the angels here, there is still a question of subsidies paid to railways. At this point, no estimates exist on what price the Canadian taxpaye must pay to facilitate grain shipment. In order to bolster Canada's dismal balance of payments picture, the public treasury should help, but no government can provide a carte blanche in an inflationary economy.

quirements for upgrading and maintenance, if 2.200 miles of line are abandoned. It is also ironic that on the same day Hall recommended scrapping 2,200 miles of efficient public transportation routes, a 15 nation team warned of a wartime urgency in the world's oil crisis.

Only time will tell if the recommendation for a northern rail line to the Arctic Ocean is economically feasible. If a pipeline will do untold damage to northern ecology a railway will do more. Hall's vision will be enthusiastically embraced by western premiers who have always seen northern resource railways as the golden fleece on wheels. Eventually there is little doubt such a line will be built. Today we can't afford it unless it is deemed a viable alternative to a pipeline. In sum though, Hall's 545 page report legitimizes almost every western economic complaint. A salient question remains why Canadians must expend so much energy confirming what they already know If it means Ottawa will act to correct some historic injustices the report will have served its purpose. Otherwise, it will add to the endless index of commissions and reports which provide chapter and verse of the divisions within Canada so long ignored at our peril as a nation.

Before the $1 reduction for foot passengers was even in their pockets. the Social Credit government Thursday snatched back half of it by raising bus fares between Vancouver Island and the mainland. The fare for bus and ferry, which would have dropped from $6.25 to $5.25 under the new fare structure recently announced, will now drop only 50 cents to $5.75 for a one-way trip.

Except for John Diefenbaker's brief reign, the Liberals have governed Canada for 42 years, feinting to the left and right as needed, maintaining power with oc-casional domestic flourishes and symbolic changes. In effect, it is a party of synthesizers rather than originators. And this is not said in a pejorative sense because the nation itself is a synthesis, delicately balanced on endless compromises.

Today the Trudeau administration and the country are faced with finely delineated, philosophical choices. No longer can we live an insulated existence the world's richest nations, free from political strife and comforted by noions of endless bounty.

Rene Levesque would tear the country asunder. Tom Berger preaches that rights of a 15,000 minority are more important been economically victimized by Central

None of these assertions can be mooted in the Canada of today. How do we fight Levesque, knowing full well that his bit-terness is well rooted? Should our rich southern lifestyle run roughshod over native culture as it did in 1885? Will western premiers accept a colonial role in the Canadian economy? And most important, will the Canadian people adopt a different country founded on tolerance rather Northrop Frye in his seminal book, The Bush Garden, wrote of Canada's 'obliterated environment", its division of languages, its dependence on immense railways to hold it physically together, and the unknown country in between.

The effects of this are "... shown even more clearly in its (Canada's) present. lack of will to resist its own disintegration in fact it is practically the only country left in the world which is a pure colony, colonial in psychology as well as in mercantile economics," Frye wrote.

This is not a harsh judgment when you consider that a Tory patriarch has tabled a report in 1977 recommending an end to Ottawa's mercantile transportation policies directed against half the country.

Margaret Avison's, Not The Sweet Cicely of Gerardes Herball, describes our predicament even more succinctly.

Cancelled by legislation years ago,

Territory Without Name

Or A Strong Nation?

This is become a territory without a name. These are terrifying lines for any Canadian who has watched our march since the demise of the Carter tax Commission in 1961. It is only through national will, pason and emotion that Levesque can be forced to redraw his projected map. And if the voyages captained by Berger and Hall are cancelled by legislation, Canada's vast tundra.

Whether a people taught to waste 15 per cent of the food they buy has the will to solve these problems humanely remains to be seen. Whether a government devoid of philosophical principles can forge a distracted nation also remains to be seen.

"My interest in this pack of failures betrays my character," Leonard Cohen wrote in Beautiful Losers.

Yet there is something grand, even in the miasma that is the Liberal government today, when it appoints Conservatives and socialists to recommend on crucial national questions, knowing full well the lumps are coming.

Without the will to reform injustices in English Canada how can this regime deal with the grievances of Quebec? If the government has the moxie to follow through on these reports it will change Canadian history. If it doesn't there may be much more Canadian history

AIB Sham

I was hoping that you would cover the subject which appeared in your editorial "Biting the bullet."

Although the AIB has certainly helped to curb inflation by controlling wages, it has always been a sham when it came to prices and the earnings of the wealthy, esecially the professional and executive stratas of our society.

I was not in the least surprised to read of the fantastic salaries and increases which were voted by those who, in fact, received these salaries and increases.

I read the other day that doctors were no longer the highest paid professionals in our society and that their incomes had been surpassed by lawyers and dentists and I am wondering, if the incomes of dentists and lawyers had been kept to the annual permitted increase of $2,400, how it was possible for this to happen. Of course no control is maintained of such incomes and, as in taxation, the person who pays is the taxpayer whose tax is deducted at source and therefore no perfectly legal loopholes are available as they are for the

I cannot believe that the average intelligent citizen still believes that our economy and the remuneration of the producers of our wealth is exercised in the nterests of the many. It is and always has been exercised in the interests of the few and might add the very affluent few. Still this is obviously what the people want. Point Missed

Evidently our prime minister is mewhat hard of hearing, for although he places great importance on the report of Mr. Justice Thomas Berger, he chooses to ignore its principal recommendation. Indeed at times it is difficult to understand whether it is the prime minister of Canada or the president of the United States who is ing us. Mr. Trudeau apparently feels that "an all-American route only for gas would be inferior" (inferior for whom, one wonders?) and "might" be against Canada's interests. What sort of prime minister do we have who can go on to say, "It's not only more costly and less good for them . . ." Who cares what it will cost 'them'? What it will cost us is what " Who cares what it will matters and the Berger report clearly shows that the environmental cost to our northland and to our native peoples would be prohibitive.

Our prime minister is also concerned because U.S. legislation requires the congress to make a final determination by mid-December and he sates, "If we don't make up our minds the U.S. will m their minds and proceed with the El Paso route and we won't have a pipeline." Precisely the idea, Mr. Prime Minister, and what the Canadian people want, judging by the Berger report.

I agree with Mr. Trudeau on one point however. It would certainly have been un-consicionable for Canada not to have made a decision, but our prime minister misses the point. A Good Word For Arms Race

The arms race is often has no government of its own. portrayed as being not only Then, one can't ignore the wasteful and dangerous but also as substantially ratuitous, an artificial thing foisted upon us by the bad choices of politicians, alternating bouts of public hysteria and apathy, and the pressures of vested interests in the bureaucracy and the economy

It follows that if we could only get a better handle on the arms-building phenomenon, we could do something about it, turn it around. The premise is widespread in the political community. It undergirded Jimmy Carter's campaign protest that the United States is the leading arms merchant of the world. It is reflected in 'World Military and Social Expenditures 1977. the valuable statistical annual prepared by Ruth Leger Sivard and released just the other day.

But is this "liberal" premise valid? It's easy and necessary to concede that there's a certain truth to it and that some part of arms spending is careless and reducible. But is it true in the main's

The larger part of the arms race, it seems to me, arises essentially from political and economic realities that are not only well-nigh irreversible but also quite desirable in in the affected countries probably would say.

The basic political factor is the decision by different peoples, or elites, to have a state or a social system of their own.

To illustrate, there was no arms race in the Middle East while the British and French conducted their empires there. Nothing is so successful in keeping the government of a resources

Then, one can't ignore the tremendous impetus given arms' building in the 20th cen tury by ideological rivalries. In that sense, the Bolshevik coup of 1917 was the seminal event But try telling that to Lenin's inheritors: They would reply that defence spending was and is essential to keep the revolution alive.

You can wish that people were wiser but you cannot deny that, to them or to their ruling elites, having a state or a social system of their own is of greater value than limiting their millitary spending or ac justing their 'national priorities." They already have set their national priorities They have something of value and, though they may regret its cost — world military spending in 1975 ran around $350 billion nearly two-thirds of it American and Soviet — they are willing to pay for it.

For them the relevant tradeoff is not between, say, missiles and schools, as the traditional pro-arms-control argument would have it, but between a military capability adequate to support their concept of sovereignty and nething less.

Can Afford It

Most of them, furthermore. can pay for it. Twentieth century affluence has made it possible for an increasing number of countries to have the military establishments they want. Are some establishments too big? Unquestionably. But the condition of affluence that sustains the military sector has brought a great many

Take the first time I ever saw a Saw-whet Owl. It was one of those cold November days, such as only Manitoba can produce, a day when the precipitation was still liquid but only just. I'd made up my mind that day to finally break my Saw-whet Owl jinx: I was going to see a Saw-whet Owl.

So, on foot. I spent the whole day wandering about at the so-called "good" spots for Saw-whet Owls around Winnipeg. I drew a complete blank: no owls.

Footsore, weary, and wet. I arrived home at dusk to hear

Each spring I'd pay the old tree a visit, thump the trunk and, after noisy scuffle from within, be greeted by a grey or brown head at the entrance and the impatient glare of a pair of Well, after several years of this, you can imagine my surprise one evening when, after my usual thump, a large round head bearing a pair of fierce yellow eyes, accentuated by two whitish eyebrows formingfa "V" in the middle, appeared in the hole to become my first nesting Saw-whet Owl. For several weeks that pair of owls, their family, and I were regular evening companions and despite heavy traffic to and from the hole. I never heard then uner a sound except for an occasional low "too-too", which seemed to me to be a signal from one adult to the other that food was on the way.

I Was All Wet About Saw-whets

That experience left me wondering what "the back and forth stroke of a file on the teeth of a saw" would sound like when, or if, I heard it.

For the next 10 years I never saw another Saw-whet Owl. Then came the aforementioned incident at Miracle Beach.
There, in the presence of sundry members of the Victoria Natural History Society foregathered to hear, and observe, the results of the Hosford patented Screech Owl call. I at last heard a Saw-whet Owl in full "song." The trouble was I didn't know it at the time

I had just given out with a couple of self-conscious renditions of my best Screechowleese — it's tough to make noises like a Screech Owl with a dozen people watching — when they were answered by a distant series of too-too-too-toothey were answered by a disability street of the street of the sounded vaguely like a Screech Owl and I was almost ready to accept them as Screech Owl sounds, their usual pattern distorted by distance, but instead of the too's slowing down and dying away as a Screech Owl's too's should, these just kept going, steadily and monotonously, for more than a minute.

None of the gathered was more perplexed than I. In the gloom of dusk, I repeated my call,—with some help from Alf Porcher, whose rendition had a devastatingly seductive quality to it - and got more answers from the un-

We finally tracked it to a grove of maples on Black Creek. But no farther could we get. The bird, despite its persistent tooing, remained completely invisible.

We gave up that night, vowing to be back the next with lights to penetrate the darkness. Back in camp I checked "the book" on owls and discovered that while the "filing" sound of a Saw-whet Owl is one of its calls, and apparently more common in the east, out west a long, almost mechanical series of short, low, whistled "tooks" is the most frequently heard variation. Had we heard a Saw-whet Owl?

To make a long story short, we were back the next night-but in another part of the park — and we heard our owl calling again. This time we got right below the calling owl and even got a rather weak beam of a flashlight on to it. What the light revealed was a pair of bright yellow eyes, in a greyish-brown head, framed by a pair of whitish eyebrows that formed a "V" in the middle — a Saw-whet Owl.

I'm about 3 years old, good looking, and built solidly to last at least another 50. It have 3 bedrooms, sunken living room, modern kitchen combined with family room and fireplace, a full basement that begs for development, plus an unobstructed view of Saanich Iniet. I must admit I've been vacant for too long and it's a lonely life. I felt I was a great bargain at $57,900.—but my 12,000 sq. ft. lot needs immediate attention and I'm prepared to accept an offer of only $51,900 just to share someone's love and care. Where else can you buy a 1370 sq. ft. family home anywhere near this price? Please have a look at me. I would be truly grateful, and your may well be rewarded with an outstanding purchase.

OLYMFIA (AP) — Commercial fishermen will be given two extra weeks to troll for salmen along Washington's coast next month, says a cting fisheries director Frank Haw.

The agency adorted regulations Friday which permit fishing for species other than cono within the state's three-mile jurisdiction through June 14. The fishery, which was originally to have been closed all month, will be closed from June 15 through June 30.

The regulations bring state waters in line with the outer 200-mile area regulated by the Pacific Regional Management Council.

B.C. Ranch Changes Hands

Colorado rancher has become the new owner of the historithe new owner of the historical Empire Valley Ranch in B.C.'s Cariboo district.

Thomas Balman Hook, of Hillside, Colo., acquired the property after completion of a trade with Robert Maytag,, another Colorado rancher, who owned the ranch from 1867 to 1973.

1967 to 1974. in 1974 the ranch was pur-chased for $1.65 million by So-phie Steeemann, a German widow, but the woman failed to meet a mortgage payment deadline earlier this year and Maytag foreclosed on the mortgage.

Derek Lonaldson, Maytag's lawyer, said Thursday in an interview from Kamloops that the two American ranchers exchanged properties in a straight swap, with Maytag acquiring Hook's Colorado ranch.

Hook's company, Balman-Hook Ranches Ltd., and May-tag's J. R. M. Holdings Ltd., Donaldson said.

The Empire Valley Ranch covers about 330,000 acres of permit, deeded and leased land and extends 65 miles south and west of the Fraser River to the base of the Coast-Range mountains 40 miles west of Clinton.

Hook said in an interview from his Colorado home that he would soon move to B.C. and he and his wife and two children will become landed immigrants on their arrival.

Empire Valley was homes-teaded in the late 1850s by

B.C. pioneer Henry Koster. His son, Henry Koster Jr., sold the ranch for $400,000 to the Clarence Bryson family of Kamloops in 1956.

African art valid expression of philosophy and lifestyles oday is big business. Years ago, a hand-carved African mask, authentic drum or hand-beaten metal spear or nand-beaten metal spear were objects stuffed into a dusty room where a dusty ec-centric colonial uncle told dusty colonial tales of how he had just missed getting trampied by a bull elephant. Or of how Aunt Mildred killed a 10-foot cobra in her kitchen, or how the cook managed still to mix a good pink gin despite being on safari miles in the bush away from the nearest hotel or town.

ADVENTURE That was the Africa of yesterday. Today, the story is different. Where once the veld teemed with game, there are now cities, towns and farms. Game has to be conserved THIS SUMMER OR FALL? and reserves are set aside for this purpose. Indeed, Lyle Guslander is several times a millionaire, a carbon copy of others whom Hawaii has blessed, islanders who rode the crest of a Kai Mimiki — the Hawaiian word for tidal wave. Only this wave involved the inpouring of visi-tors along with the greatest sustained growth in tourism ever experienced by any re-sort destination in the world. Besides Guslander — he is 62 years old — it has produced an impressive number of millionaires: the Roy Kelleys, the Chinn Hos, the Chris Hemmeters, the Bill Maus, to Others, obviously, will come along. New millionaires. It has only begun. While the building boom has slackened, building boom has stackeled, by no means is it over. The Maui Land and Pineapple Co. is creating a new multimillion-dollar reprecious land which should be treated with great affection,' said a tourism official).

And the youngest million aire of them all — 37-year-old Chris Hemmeter — only recently announced he will build a $60 million resort along Maui's Kaanapali Beach — Hawaii's new gold coast which, in the end, could well out-Waikiki Waikiki itself, although one prays this won't

Alexander and Baldwin, one of Hawaii's Big Five, soon will start construction on an entire new community be-tween Kahului and Wailuku a 500-acre development that will encompass golf courses, shops and fairway homes. (A and B is developing the lux-ury Wailea resort on Maui.)

Even Lyle Guslander, with his enormous wealth, longs for more action. At Poipu Beach on Kauai he envisions a new high-rise hotel, even though he is bitterly opposed by local peridents.

Hawaii's tourism evolution began with Waikiki. The Hiltons came. So did the Sheratons as well as the independents — the Guslanders and the Kelleys. Later it spread to the neighboring islands.

Even Somnolent Molokai one of the last holdouts — is awakening. Sheraton forces stormed the island, setting up a beachhead on the western shore. Scattered across Ke-puni Beach are 292 low-rise, Polynesian-style rooms adjacent to an 18-hole golf course. Over the next dozen years Sheraton envisions additional hotels, condominiums, single-family homes, parks commercial shopping Developers have their as well. So the question is asked: Is prosperity destroying paradise? In 1960 only 5,000 rooms existed in all of count puts the figure at 45,000 rooms, of which 23,000 are crowded into that gaudy, glittering seven-tenths of a mile known as Waikiki.

Still, other hotels will be retourism growing at an annual rate of 12 per cent a room shortage is bound to occur, they argue. Said an airline exnow!' But let me tell you this: These islands are capable of receiving millions more and paradise can remain paradise

Therein, of course, lies the challenge. Fortunately for Hawaii, new safeguards have been created. Since the frantic and phenomenal boom years of 1365-72, when it appeared that every rooftop was the roosting place for a construction crane zoning and building codes have been stiffened. Waikiki finds itself in a special design district, and so it is no longer permissible to build to the ery sidewalk.

Height limitations depend on the island; four stories on Kauai. 10 stories on the, Big Island and a dozen stories Maui, whose district takes Molokai. In the high-density districts of Oahu the builder can go as high as 350 feet. Other ordinances deal with parking, landscaping and the design of buildings.

Still, without additional safeguards certain business leaders feei greedy developers will succeed in devouring Hawali's yet-uncluttered

Moncton may be the only city in Canada incorporated twice as a town. The first time was in 1855, when ship-building was in its heyday. But it didn't last and the town reverted to village status in 1862. In 1872, Moncton was cho-

What is claimed to be the World's largest single storey Chinese restaurant is located in the new Ocean Centre, the 700,000 sq. ft. shopping, commercial and entertainment complex near the Hyatt Hong Kong Hotel in Kowloon.

The new restaurant needs a staff of 400, including cooks and service personnel. All different varieties of Chinese cuisine are available in Hong Kong, which has eating houses large and small in all sections of the city.

Some of the finest Chinese meals are served in hotels, such as the Hong Kong Hyatt, which have chefs trained to prepare the various regional delicacles.

Post Pressmen Get Fines, Jail

WASHINGTON (WP) Post pressmen were given sentences Friday ranging from $250 fines to one year in prison stemming from incidents during a pressmen's strike against the newspaper that began in 1975.

District of Columbia Superior Court Judge Sylvia Bacon imposed the sentences, saying that "the existence of a labor dispute or a strike does not justify violence." She described the pressmen's actions during the strike as "planned," "purposeful" and "unjustified," and she added, "these events did not erupt sponteneously."

The sentences were angrily denounced by members of the pressmen's families and sup-porters, who disrupted the courtroom with shouts, sobbing, chants and singing.
David Rein, a lawyer for the pressmen, later told reporters that the sentences were "extremely harsh." The prosecutors declined to comment on the sentences. They had asked for stiff pen-

A HOBBY AT HEART

EDMONTON (CP) — As sometimes happens, a man's hobby becomes his business. Such is the case of George Moir who used to dabble in more who used to deade in parts for antique cars—specifically Fords in the 1909-1948 model range. About four years ago he started to sell parts he had accumulated and soon demand dictated the sourcerion of a 25-year hopby conversion of a 25-year hobby into a business. As well as the genuine old parts, he found people also wanted new fixtures which copied the originals. Moir applied for a dealership and, using six garages and the basement of his home, he was in business. in business.

May 24th ... and Memories

Whenever a 24th of May looms up on the calender now, I find myself going back in memory to a long ago time when I was young and care-free and the years reached out ahead of me.

Life was made up of simple pleasures in those days. There was no television. Cystal set radios were new. piles were owned only by the means of transportation and on this particular holiday (held always on the date intended for it and not on the nearest Monday, (as, it is to-day) they were crowded from early morning until late at right.

The 24th of May heralded beginning of the summer sea-son, so it was customary to don whites for the first time in the year.

Mothers washed and starched and ironed for days ahead. They cooked too, for it was traditionally the first picnic day of the year, as well start in order to stake out a strategic spot from which to watch the morning parade. After it was over, parents and grandparents, children and picnic baskets, jammed aboard street cars, bound for the Gorge and the afternoon Families joined together on Someone was sure to uncover a freezer of homemade icecream as a surprise for races and before long the day was nearly over.

Pičnic baskets were repacked and the streetcars were homeward bound with tired but happy throngs.

A few years later the same boys and girls who scrambled around the icecream freezer, were well into their teens.

They still went to the parade, they still joined the grown-ups for a picnic lunch up the Gorge, but after it was over they wandered off in twos and fours and sixes. And you'd find them at the

Laughing Dentistry Back In Style

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) Laughing gas as a painkiller

A growing number of den tists are offering their pa-tients laughing gas, also known as nitrous oxide, to dental work.

And other people have discovered it can be used to ease the pain and anxiety of life as raided a dental supply house in Concord, N.H., three times, taking cylinders of nitrous oxide. The manager told police laughing gas is the latest party entertainment.

So laughing gas's new life is a double one. More and more nitrous freaks use it and the American Dental Association says 20 to 30 per cent of all dentists now give it to their

"I don't like to go to the dentist myself," says Dr. Joseph Tregaskes, a Richmond, Va., dental professor and prosthodontist. "So if I think nitrous can reduce a patient's anxiety. I offer it. It's a very pleasant experience."

Tregaskes says the colorless gas is well-suited to den-tistry as an analgesic; the patient never loses conscious the doctor.

A machine regulates the gaseous mixture of oxygen and nitrous oxide, each of which comes tanked in pure form. The patient inhales the mix-ture from a mask. After a few minutes the body begins to tingle and the patient be-comes lightheaded, mildly euphoric and utterly detached - even as the drill goes to work.

Laughing gas started out in the last century as an enter-tainment in parlors and car-nival shows, and there are indications it's again fated for extensive non-clinical use.

Pure nitrous oxide can be deadly — it replaces oxygen in the lungs. So many nitrous freaks inhale from a balloon up. It also affords a dubious safety valve to those who overindulge; if the user starts to pass out, the balloon falls away from the mouth and oxvgen enters the lungs.

But there is a cloud hovering over the dental use and illegal use, for that matter of

KNIT AND CHAT

Crocheting Popular in Summer

, I received a rather cute let-ter this week from a reader who complimented me on my column. She writes, "However, there is one thing I have noticed. These past few weeks you have been writing more crochet, this is disappointing. I would dearly love to have some patterns on knitted edges. After all, your column is Knit and Chat," so how about it?"

Well, I must admit I slant the pattern I select to the time of year, and I always feel that crochet, especially cotton doilies, appeal to more people to make, during the warmer months. First, there is no bulk in the work. They is no bulk in the work. They are a smaller project, quickly made, easily picked up for odd moments of relaxation and easily carried around. One can almost slip the entire work in a plastic bag and into a handbag.

So during the summer months, I must admit, I fea-ture crochet doilies and other articles, plus baby sets for the same reasons I have already given, though quite a number of these are knitted. I usually feature a ski-sweater or two towards the end of the sum-mer. This is for people who take a little longer time with their knitting.

Of these, a few wallflowers and forget-me-nots are available as grown plants in September, (not in spring), but the other gems of grandmother's garden are seen only when gardeners grow' their own plants from seed.

Most of these biennials go back a long way in gardening history therefore have collected many common names which do not appear on seed packets causing gardeners to assume they are no longer available.

If only for the record, here If only for the record, here are the botanical names under which the seeds are packaged plus a few of the more common names given the plants by gardeners.

Canterbury-bells are Campenula medium, in white and delicate tones of pink and blue. Since this is biennial it does not take over the garden

Foxgloves are Digitalis, of which the Giant Shirley Mixed (4½ ft.) has large bell-flowers (4½ ft.) has large bell-flowers closely packed, with colors ranging from white through dark rose and purple, spotted with maroon and crimson.

The Excelsior Hybrids, a newer strain, are a little taller (5 ft.) bearing flowers all around the stem in a horizontal position showing the marking within the blooms. Colors include white, cream, primrose, shades of pink, and purple.

Honesty". Money-plant, Silver Dollar, or Moon-plant is Lunaria (Moon-flower), the plant which bears the large round silvery seed pouches that are dried for winter flower arrangements.

Sweet Rocket, Dame's rocket, or Dame's-violet (from the perfume) is not listed in every seed catalog. If the plants are not destroyed as soon as the mass of color is over, seeds are freely spread and it becomes a nui-sance. Its botanical name is Hesperis matronalis (the Ma-

Sweet William is Dianthus barbatus; plants which have been unjustly given a bad name by gardeners who thought all Dianthus were perennials. However, some colors may persist for two or three years in a soil well drained in winter. The bienni-al Sweet Williams should not be confused with the annual Sweet William now on sale for summer bedding. Biennial varieties are Midget (6 ins.) Early Spring Messenger, extra early flowering (20 ins.), Stokes tall double mixed (18 ins.) and Barbatus mixed (24 ins.). The best known biennials are probably Wallflowers which, accordings to the seed catalog, "thrive best in cool moist areas near the ocean on the West Coast."

Botanically Cheiranthus cheiri, but usually listed under "wallflower," a good choice is Finest Double Mixed (20 ins.) in shades of lemon, orange, rose, and mulberry.

When wallflowers are mentioned as biennials many local gardeners mustion the statetor five or ten years. There is one shade which sometimes persists in sheltered local gardens, but the preferred colors which are further from the type plant are true biennials. Seed of biennials should be sown before the end of May.

sown before the end of May, either in a prepared and sheltered seed bed outdoors, directly into the soil of a cold-frame, or in shallow boxes placed under a sheltering shrub or in a coldframe until germinated.

Every nome garden will have some spot that is suitable; the main points are shelter from the elements (frost, rain), filtered sunlight, and not too much heat.

When an outdoor seed bed is used it should be in dappled scrlight under high trees, or provision should be made for the erection of artificial shade such as cheesecloth or net onion sacks, or a lath covering.

As soon as the seed are sown, start the preparation of another area, more open but still with some protection from sun during the hottest part of the day, and large enough to take all the biennial about nine inches.

This is the "nursery" bed where the plants will grow this summer. Transplanting from the seed bed is done as soon as the seedlings are large enough to handle, after which regular watering and cultivation is continued until the plants move to beds and borders in early September, to become established before the growing season ends.

If you lack the facilities for growing your own biennials, contact your plant supplier as soon as possible and let him know your needs, for he also must sow now to have plants ready for sale in September.

As this year's planting of bi-ennials go out of flower, pull up the plants and add them to the-compost heap, and replant the beds with summer flower-

Woody met Diane when he was auditioning actresses for the lead role in his Broadway production Play It Again, Sam, a tribute to Humphrey Bogart. Experts Conduct Classes

One of North America's supreme artists in a highly specialized area is to spend a week at the Victoria Conservatory of Music, May 30 through June 3.

She is Gwendolyn Koldofsky, one of the foremost accompanists and vocal coaches of our time, professor and chairman of the Department of Accompanying at the University of Southern Cali-

At the Conservatory, Madame Koldofsky will conduct a five-day master class for singers and pianists. Regis-trations for the session have come from a wide area and anyone interested who has not so far registered should get in touch with Catherine Young, head of the Conservatory

There will be four sessions daily each of the five days. Complete tuition is $75; single sessions, $15. Low-cost accommodation for out-of-towners is available at UVic.

In conjunction with the Koldofsky master classes, Dr. Erich Schwandt, musicologist, harpsichordist and early music expert, will be giving daily lectures on the ba style in singing, with special reference to the trill, recitative and cadenzas. He will also conduct master classes in the harmonic vices held. the baroque vocal solo.

From Monday, May 30, through Thursday, June 2, the master classes will be held in room 144 in the MacLaurin Building at UVic. On the final day. day, June 3, the sessions will move to the Conservatory of Music.

During her long professional career, Koldoisky made extensive tours in the U.S., Canada, Europe and the Far East, accompanying such renowened artists as Lotte Lehman, Susan Danco, Mari-lyn Horne, Frances Adaskin Zara Nelsova and others.

She has received the highest ty of Southern California and has also had a distinguished association with the Academy of the West at Santa Barbara for the past 29 years.

Schwandt is a graduate of Stanford University and taught at Eastman School of Music before joining the music faculty at UVic. Sever-al of his Eastman students music faculty at UVic. TOKYO - Mr. Senda is one of the more obvious victims of

Instead of the privileges of kiyo Senda, who as a child tumbled with Emperor Hiro-hito of Japan, rises at five each morning to pack lunch-boxes with pickled rice balls. He makes a bare living.

Japan's peerage system was abolished when the new constitution — drafted by the American occupation — came into force in May 1947, Article 14 reads: Peers and peerage shall not be recognized. Hereditary peerage didn't square with General Mac-Arthur's democratization pro-

Every so often, the ascent by express elevator to the 34th floor is undertaken by one of Emperor Hirohito's relatives — his three brothers escaped the purge of social status, and what with their own and Hirohito's offspring, there is still a modest sprink-line of anistocynts on the action. ling of aristocrats on the active list to enliven this oasis of defunct noblesse.

As opposed to these princes of the Imperial blood, the other members are relics of the hereditary peerage created by the Emperor Meiji in 1884 to honor courtiers, and Daimyo (feudal lords) and their descendants. their descendants.

Senda inherited his barony just as the Pacific war was starting. His father had been chosen as one of 66 barons (out of over 400) to sit in the House of Peers which composed all princes and marquises but only a limited number of the lesser ranks. The institution was killed off by occupation supremo Mac-Arthur after the war, and replaced with a popularly elected Upper House.

Although many of those deknighted in MacArthur's reforms have since passed away, an aura lingers, sur-vivors of the nearly 1,000 peers, and their descendants, affect a dismissive attitude to-wards social rank, yet still cling together for mutual re-assurance, in a shared perassurance, in a shared per-ception that they are a few notches above the swarm of commoners 34 floors below. And there is always that out-side chance of a rightist coup that would revitalize the Em-peror system and restore the peror system and restore the reage.

"At least you wouldn't have a Lockheed scandal in the House of Peers," says Senda, laughing. "And there was none of the waste of money of elections."

Prime Ministers like Tanaka and motorbike makers like Honda are disdained as "merchants." And club members like to tell visitors about an unwritten rule: "Discussions of politics or business forbid-

Scott—Collier

The chapel in Metropolitan United Church was the setting for a double-ring ceremony at 2 p.m. on Saturday, February 12, 1977, when Valerie Alison, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Collier of Victoria, B.C., became the bride of Brian Andrew Scott, eldest son of Mr. Earl Scott, Edmonton, Alta, and the late Mrs. Scott. The saying of the marriage vows was solemnized by Rev. Albert E. King.

Given in marriage by, her parents, the bride wore a Victorian styled dress of Ivory satin, featuring lace from her mother's wedding dress. She wore her mother's veli, caught up into a tiny cap of lace and pearls, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The maid of honour was Ingrid Lawlor. Bridesmaids were Corline Osborn and Sheelagh Collier, sister of the bride. The groom was attended by his brother Curtis as best man. The ushers were Brian Collier, brother of the bride, and Brian Carr. Colin Creed served as ring boy.

Following a reception at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club where Walter Creed proposed a toast to the bride, the guests returned to the home of the bride's parents where a good time was had by all. Mr. and Mrs. Scott are now residing in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

SAS Averts Shutdown

COPENHAGEN (Reuter) A total shutdown of Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS) was averted when the airlines reached a wage agreement with Danish cabin crews.

An airline spokesman said some SAS flights would resume today, including those to North America and others within Scandinavia.

Before the settlement, the Danish cabin crews were scheduled to join 2,200 Swedish and Norwegian colleagues who went on strike May 9 after the breakdown of their wage talks. The Danish crews have a separate agreement with SAS.

Have a fashion fling with Aljean tartans and flannels!

Mac-goodness, if you listen you can almost hear the bagpipes play. Aljean brings you a little bit of Scotland alive with bold, bright authentic tartans. This is the garthering of the clans — the fashion clans. With the whirl of a kilt, a wee bit of a vest and, of course a bonnie blazer. Good looks for any lassie to team with slimming skirts, soft shirts and straight legged pants. Of 100% virgin wool, each piece breathes life into the spirit of the tartans. Authentic tartans such as the McInnis, the Stewarts, the Buchanan — plus more. And flannel, in navy or Kelly Green. Have a fashion fling at Eaton — With Aljean co-ordinates, for sizes 6 to 16.

His view that compulsory force for at least another year available Friday in Ottawa.

Previously, the government has indicated it might start dismantling pay and profit controls as early as Oct. 14, second anniversary of the anti-inflation program.

Some influential voices have called for their retention

Eut Trudeau now suggests controls should stay until later next year. They are due to expire legally Dec. 31, 1978. Discussing labor-union op-position to controls in an in-

Trudeau is quoted as saying that after opinion polls showed support for controls, the unions began to get the message.
"It will be necessary to return one day to free en-terprise and collective bar-gaining," Trudeau is quoted as saying.

"But it would be folly, in ny view, to abolish controls before the general election. Asked when that would be, Trudeau replied that "the constitution gives us another two years, and I don't want to. create election fever. Let's say in principle it will take place in a year. . . . "

Trudeau did not elaborate in the interview on the need for retaining controls. But Fi-nance Minister Donald Macdonald and others have cited the danger of setting off re-newed bouts of inflation if controls are removed too early.

The government favors a gradual removal of controls in which the first companies and unions to come under controls would also be the first ones freed from the program.

There has been discussion of possible dates for the end of the program in recent months with representatives of labor, business and the provincial governments. The earliest likely date for removal is Oct. 14, the second anniversary of the program, but some influential voices have called for an extension. Finance Minister Donald Macdonald has said an earlier date is unlikely unless both labor and business agree to voluntary restraint.
